

Guidelines for Remote Learning

Remote Learning is a year-long program intended for students diagnosed with a medical condition which prevents normal school attendance due to a compromised immune system. Students enrolled in Remote Learning may participate in school sponsored extra-curricular activities where virtual participation is feasible. Remote Learners may not participate in non-academic activities such as field trips. If the student's medical condition improves allowing the student to return to school, a medical clearance form must be submitted to remote@madison-schools.com. If approved, the transition back to the school may only occur at the end of a nine-week grading period.
